NAZIS DISORGANIZE UTILITIES SERVICE IN BRITISH TOWN

Attacks Made at Isolated Points in Southeastern England and Midlands

BOMB CASUALTIES

British Planes Chase Bombers Out To Sea; One German Craft in Flames

By International News Service
LONDON, Aug. 21.—Disorganizing gas, water and electricity services in at least one town, bands of German air raiders carried out attacks on isolated points in southeastern England and the midlands today.

One German plane dropped eight explosive bombs on a town in the midlands, destroying a number of houses and causing a number of casualties, some of them fatal. It was not known whether the bombing was deliberate or whether the flier jettisoned his bombs in an effort to outdistance RAF pursuers.

Raiding Nazi planes were reported over various areas during the afternoon.

In another attack, a German plane swooped down upon a coastal town and fired four bursts of machine-gun fire into the main street. No casualties were reported.

A session of a southwest England police court was interrupted by an air raid.

A northeast English town had its first air raid of the war when three German bombers made a hit and run attack on it. Three bombs were dropped. A gas main was set afire, but was quickly extinguished.

British planes chased the bombers out to sea. Flames and heavy smoke were pouring from one of the fleeing Nazi raiders, and it appeared that plane was brought down.

DRIVE CHAIRMAN

RICHARD HAY WOOLSEY

Widely known attorney and resident of Mt. Airy, who has accepted reappointment as chairman of the 1941 Salvation Army Greater Philadelphia Maintenance Drive, beginning January 7. The drive supports 22 Salvation Army agencies in this city.

WILL ACT AS HEAD OF SALVATION ARMY DRIVE

Richard Hay Woolsey, Widely Known Attorney, Accepts Reappointment

INCLUDES BUCKS CO.

Richard Hay Woolsey, widely known attorney, today accepted reappointment as chairman of the 1941 Greater Philadelphia Maintenance Fund Campaign of The Salvation Army.

Mr. Woolsey, who resides at 169 West Durham street, in Mt. Airy, served as chairman of the Campaign this year, which closed successfully in April with the raising of its $200,000 quota.

The chairmanship of the 1941 drive was tendered to Mr. Woolsey by Major Samuel Hepburn, Divisional Commander of The Salvation Army in this area, and David R. Carson, Chairman of the Philadelphia Salvation Army Advisory Board, composed of prominent citizens who assist in guiding the work of the organization.

The funds raised in the Maintenance drive, conducted in Philadelphia, Chester, Delaware, Montgomery and Bucks County, support the diversified social service program of the 22 Salvation Army agencies in this area. Among these agencies are the Ivy House for orphaned children, the Settlement House and Day Nursery, caring for children of working mothers and providing play facilities for poor children; the Home and Hospital for unwed mothers, the Fresh-Air Camp at Upland, in Delaware County, where children and their mothers are now being given summer vacations; the Social Service Center, providing work for aged and handicapped men; the Men's hotels where transients are given food and lodging, and the ten corps centers, where community activities are held.

Mr. Woolsey, who is a member of the law firm of Woolsey, Phillips & Thrill, in the Fidelity Philadelphia Trust Building, has for 20 years been counsel for The Army.

"It is because of my knowledge of the tremendous job that The Salvation Army does each day of the year among the needy and unfortunate of our community that I am glad to be able to again head the Maintenance Fund Campaign," he said.

"In the stress of war time, we are apt to forget that many of our neighbors face disaster equal in heartbreak to that suffered by people in battle devastated areas, and it is for these neighbors that The Salvation Army asks the generous public to support its work."

"The Salvation Army's record in peace time and in war time is too well known for me to dwell upon. Suffice to say that it is always mobilized in the cause of humanity, and it serves those in need of material and spiritual aid without regard to race, color or creed. The Salvation Army is especially trained through long years of experience to aid all unfortunates, no matter what the type of their need may be."

"The funds given by Philadelphians to the Maintenance Campaign are used entirely in Salvation Army Work in this city. Not one penny goes for any other purpose."

Mr. Woolsey was born in Girard, Pennsylvania. He is 50 and a graduate of Colorado College and the University of Pennsylvania Law School. He was admitted to the bar in 1916 and served overseas with the United States Signal Corps during the war. He is married. Mrs. Woolsey being the former Grace Truesdell, of Germantown.

Criticizes U. S. For Not Changing Ship's Route

Berlin, Aug. 21.—Bitter criticism of the U. S. Government was voiced in Germany today for its action in refusing to change the route followed by the U. S. army transport American Legion, en route to the U. S. from Finland with some 900 refugees from the war zone.

An official announcement said the German Foreign Office last night handed a new note to the U. S. Embassy in Berlin concerning the vessel. Germany previously issued a warning that it would not be responsible for the safety of the American Legion because the route it followed took it through an area which had been mined.

Woman in Trotsky Case

Mexico City, Aug. 21.—A mysterious young woman identified as Sylvia Angeloff, of Brooklyn, N. J., entered the Leon Trotsky case today.

The woman, located by police after a night-long search, was believed to have introduced Trotsky to Jacques Monrod, suspected GPU agent who is accused of trying to kill the exiled Bolshevik leader.

Warn Against Overconfidence

London, Aug. 21.—Despite the over-optimism voiced by Prime Minister Churchill yesterday, conservative London observers today cautioned against jumping to the conclusion that Adolf Hitler is bound to fail if he attempts invasion of England.

They pointed, on the other hand, to increasing indications that Germany will make a desperate effort to invade this island, probably around the 27th or 28th of this month. Even friendly neutrals say it must not be taken for granted that the Nazis will fail.

According to naval circles, Hitler will have an advantage toward the end of this month when the moon has gone and darkness reigns. He will be able presumably to move his troops, tanks and artillery carrying ships throughout the night without being seen.

It is known that the Fuehrer has accumulated masses of steamers in the eastern Baltic, most of them lying beyond regular observation of R. A. F. reconnaissance.

WILLKIE RENEWS CHALLENGE TO F. D. R.

Says He Does Not Believe The President Should Decline To Debate Issues

REFERS TO ICKES SPEECH

RUSHVILLE, Ind., Aug. 21.—"I do not believe that even the President of the United States has a right to eliminate public discussion or to refrain from engaging in it when seeking public office," said Wendell L. Willkie yesterday as he renewed his challenge to President Roosevelt.

Willkie again challenged Roosevelt for a series of debates in various parts of the country upon the issues of the campaign.

A few hours later, Willkie made a surprise appearance before a joint dinner meeting of the Rushville Rotary and Kiwanis clubs and, with obvious reference to last night's attack by Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, said:

"The atmosphere of Indiana means much to me, it is an atmosphere where I learned that when we have a blow to strike we strike it ourselves and we don't strike a foul blow through stooges."

Willkie made his second challenge immediately after news dispatches from Hyde Park had reported that President Roosevelt had turned down the proposal which Willkie had made in his acceptance speech at Elwood Saturday.

Willkie offered to meet him in the places Mr. Roosevelt visits during inspection tours of defenses.

He said he was willing to start the series any place in the country—even in Washington.

Willkie was mildly ironical about the President's inspection trip, saying:

"I would suggest that the President name experts who understand the building of defense work to make inspection trips with regards to such defense work and that the President devote such time as he now uses for that purpose to make democracy work by discussing the issues in which the American people are very much interested."

In addition, Willkie sought to draw a distinction between Mr. Roosevelt as President and as a private citizen.

Here and There in Bucks County Towns

The annual dinner of the Wallace Willard Keller Post, American Legion, of Quakertown, is arranged for September 23rd, at "Twin Gables."

A picnic is planned by the group, this to be held at "Shady Nook," Quakertown, on Sunday next.

County Agent William F. Greenawald announced that the Bucks County 4-H Club Vegetable judging team placed first in State-wide competition at 4-H Club Week at State College.

LIKES PARTIES DESPITE BEING 80 YEARS OLD

Mrs. Mercy S. Headley, Morrisville, Not Interested in War or Politics

STILL IN GOOD HEALTH

MORRISVILLE, Aug. 21.—"Because I felt good enough," Mrs. Mercy S. Headley, 248 Stockham avenue, gave a birthday party upon the occasion of her 80th birthday.

Despite her 80 years, Mrs. Headley just doesn't act or look that old. She retains all her faculties and has recovered splendidly from a recent three-month illness.

Born August 9, 1860, in Dollington, Pa., the daughter of George and Elizabeth Slack, she married Byron S. Headley, of Penn Valley, in 1884, and moved to Tullytown. In 1885 they moved to a farm in Penns Manor and in 1926 took up their residence here. Mr. Headley died in 1928, two years after leaving his farm work. A companion for the past 33 years, Miss Hattie E. Swain helped Mrs. Headley as a child and has been with her ever since.

Vacuum cleaners and refrigerators seem to Mrs. Headley to be just about the greatest inventions of the present time. She doesn't particularly like the movies and listens to the radio mostly for waltzes and old-time square dance music. Although she doesn't get out much, aside from inspecting her flowers which surround the house, she says she doesn't miss entertainment for she likes to "watch the kids." Politics and the war news have no place in her life, she says, as she has little interest in either.

Each morning she arises at 7.30 o'clock. When asked if she would like to reach 100 years old Mrs. Headley said no, for she felt she might lose her health by that time. If she felt at 100 as good as she feels today, then she just wouldn't mind, she added.

At a party honoring her anniversary, Mrs. Headley was the recipient of many gifts. As for the parties, she says, "I'd like to have parties every day if all of them are as nice as this one."

Residents Shiver As The Mercury Strikes Fifty

Bristol and Eastern states in general shivered during the night and early morning, when the mercury reached an August "low" of 50 degrees Fahrenheit at six and seven a. m.

With a range of 22 degrees registered at the Rohm & Haas weather observatory here, the highest temperature throughout yesterday but 72, this being the height for four hours in the late afternoon.

The percentage of relative humidity for the 24 hour period from eight a. m. yesterday to eight a. m. today was but 76, as compared to 89 per cent on Monday, and 98 per cent two days previous, Saturday.

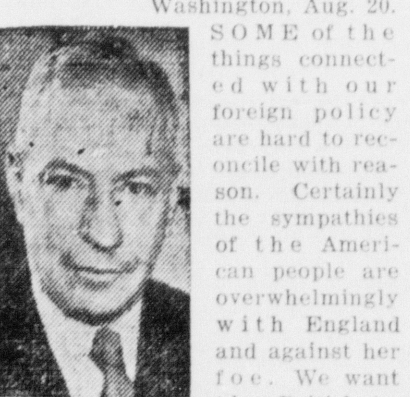

From 11 o'clock last evening when the thermometer registered 58 until eight this morning the mercury did not get out of the fifties.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

"Distributed by McNaught Syndicate, Inc."

It Ought To Stop

Washington, Aug. 20. SOME of the things connected with our foreign policy are hard to reconcile with reason. Certainly the sympathies of the American people are overwhelmingly with England and against her foe, the British to win not only for strong sentimental reasons but because their defeat would mean a world infinitely more menacing and uncomfortable for us.

THERE is little dispute about that. It has been made clear by the President, by members of his Cabinet and of Congress, by New Dealers, anti-New Dealers, Democrats and Republicans. Mr. Willkie is just as emphatic about it as Mr. Roosevelt. Differences of opinion exist concerning the size and character of our defense preparations, the desirability of conscription and the advisability of taking certain definite steps that have been suggested. But neither anti-conscriptionists nor isolationists oppose a defense program. Nor is there any divergence of opinion as to why, already burdened with debt and taxes but with overwhelming approval of the people, we are preparing to pour out billions of dollars for armament.

IT is against Germany that we prepare, not against England. Germany constitutes a potential threat against us, not England. It is against the possibility of a Hitler-dominated world that we arm; if England wins her battle, there is nothing against which to arm. All of this has been said many times before. Ambassador Bullitt said it very passionately in Philadelphia Sunday night. It is quite obvious

POLICE ARREST THREE FOR TRUCK HITCHING

Boys' Wheels Are Taken and Held As Security For Their Appearance

GET HEARING TONIGHT

Police swung into action last night against cyclists who hitch onto trucks.

The boys were taken into custody and were ordered to appear for a hearing tonight in the municipal building.

The boys gave their names as William Bellerby, 14 Cedar avenue; Norman Barlow, 16 Princess avenue; Herbert Coar, 16 Maynes Lane, all of Crofton.

The trio was seen riding while holding onto a big truck as the vehicle travelled east along Pond street.

Chief of Police Linford J. Jones and Bucks County Detective Anthony Russo jumped into a car and gave chase, pursuing the boys along Pond street. The three were caught in the sixth ward still holding onto the truck.

The boys were ordered to ride back to the municipal building and to proceed just ahead of the officers' car.

The boys were taken into the municipal building, slated and ordered to leave their bicycles with the police, as security that they would return for a hearing tonight. The boys will be deprived of the use of their bicycles all day today.

The police are determined to stop at once the practice of cyclists hitching onto trucks.

Leon Trotsky Near Death; Attacked at Mexican Home

By International News Service
MEXICO CITY, Aug. 21.—His life virtually despaired of, Leon Trotsky, 60-year-old Bolshevik and one of the founders of the Soviet Union, appeared to be sinking fast today after a mysterious attack at his Coyoacan home by an equally mysterious assailant.

The Bolshevik's head was torn through to the brain by two blows from an Alpine pick which the assailant, presumably a welcome guest in Trotsky's home, had concealed in his clothing.

After a nightlong investigation, mystery still shrouded actual identity of the would-be killer.

Seized immediately after the attack, the assailant was taken to police headquarters. During questioning, he gave six different names—Jacques Moonard Van Den Dessel, Jacques Morton, Jacques Mortan, Frankie Johnson, Frank Jackson and Jacques Monrod.

Col. Leandro Salazar, chief of the detective bureau, said he was convinced the man's real name is Monrod, that he is a Belgian and that he came to this country as an agent of the GPU, the Soviet secret police.

The prisoner lapsed into incoherence as detectives questioned him. A medical bulletin said that Trotsky was unconscious and breathing faintly. His condition was "very grave."

U. S. VEGETABLE GROWERS TO VISIT BUCKS CO. FARMS

Include Tour To Starkey, King and Becker Farms in 32nd Convention Program

BIG DEMONSTRATIONS

Latest Types of Farm Machinery and Equipment To Be Displayed

The Starkey, Becker, King and Conly Farms, all in this section of Pennsylvania, are included in the plans for the 32nd annual convention of the Vegetable Growers' Association of America, tours being outlined to these Bucks and Montgomery County farms.

The annual convention is to be held in Philadelphia from August 26th to 29th, inclusive, and from that metropolis many trips will radiate.

A number of residents of this area are aiding the officers in the convention plans.

The tour of the four farms, Becker, Starkey, King and Conly, is arranged for Thursday afternoon, August 29th. Over 1000 people are expected to attend the demonstration of the latest types of farm machinery and equipment on the King Farms, near Morrisville.

The gross business of the vegetable industry amounts to nearly one billion dollars annually, it is reported, or one-fourth of the total income from all crops grown in the United States.

This is the third time that Philadelphia has been selected as the scene of the national convention, previous sessions being held there in 1914 and in 1929.

The Junior Judging Committee expects an attendance in the junior branch of about 400 boys and girls from 30 different states who will compete for prizes and honors in judging vegetables, and in identifying varieties and diseases.

Women delegates also attend the convention in large numbers in company with their husbands and have a separate program during part of the convention.

The speaking program being held at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel on Monday and Tuesday will include discussions on many important problems. On Wednesday a tour through New Jersey includes Campbell Soup Company, the Gloucester Farmers' Market and the Seabrook Farms Company where the delegates will see vegetables grown, prepared, packed and frozen by a famous process of freezing.

At five o'clock on Tuesday morning there will be a market tour through Dock street and at 11 p. m. a tour to the auction terminals at Philadelphia. Entertainment on Sunday evening will include colored motion pictures of travel in Mexico and foreign countries, a train ride to Atlantic City on Monday night and a real banquet and dance on Wednesday evening at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel.

County Agents and prominent officials from both the New Jersey Agricultural College and Pennsylvania State College are giving every assistance in making the convention a success.

Convention delegates come from all over the United States and Canada to exchange the latest information in regard to the vegetable industry. Those who attend include farmers, college professors, research workers and government officials.

The Ninth District delegates to the Boston convention will be Raymond L. Hemmerly, Melrose Park, and Nase Leedom, Willow Grove. The other alternate will be Norman Johns, Pottstown.

A nominating committee appointed to name candidates for the A. R. Atkinson, Jr. Post next year was appointed last night by Commander Butler. This committee consisting of Joseph G. Mountenay, chairman, Captain Daniel D. Atkinson, Fred J. Dietz, Harry S. Hobensack, Warren Elvill and Walter R. Lewis, will meet Sept. 15.

Doylestown May Build Borough Offices

DOYLESTOWN, Aug. 21.—This Borough will consider plans to erect a municipal building at the next meeting of Council after a special committee of Council has conferred with trustees of the Doylestown Fire Company concerning the purchase of a lot adjacent to the present fire house.

The plan, advanced by Burgess John J. Sweeney, calls for all borough offices being housed together under one roof, including police, tax collection and Council Chamber. Some Councilmen are opposed to the plan because the Borough debt is now $130,500. Burgess Sweeney advises them to get Government aid.

IN AUGUST

Bayard Taylor, author, called the month of August a "tideless expansion of slumber." It apparently represented to him a sleepy quiet, a tendency to repose, a feeling that the summer has passed its meridian of heat and activity.

A pleasant languor steals through the air. People feel like sitting in the shade sipping cooling drinks. Something of the buoyant energy of spring and early summer has gone.

August is the most popular month for vacations. The warm and muggy days convince people they need a rest. If able to do so, they depart from the pavements of cities and towns in search of resting places under waving tree branches and by the side of cooling lakes and shores.

Nature is seen at the top notch of fertility. The fields of corn that will soon be stripped to fill the mouths of man and beast, still stand glistening in the sun. Man's toil and effort has produced a rich fruitage, and one that will bring comfort through lean days of winter.

The trees shine with the most intense green that nature's chemical laboratory can produce. August sees every color of the rainbow joining in the symphony of the garden. Every wild flower joins in praise to bountiful nature.

Someone once said that August is not a month to be admired, since it makes people feel lazy, and that the world performs less useful labor than in any month of the year. Possibly, yet out of any loafing done in August there comes the relaxation of nerve and muscle that creates energy. Whether August is devoted to work or play, there is no better month in which to look at the marvels of nature with eyes of amazement.

WALTER P. CHRYSLER

Death of Walter P. Chrysler removes from the American scene one of the last great leaders produced by the industrial expansion in this country that appears to have been checked in the last decade. Born poor, his first occupations in life not too promising, Chrysler worked his way to the top by his own efforts.

Although he had occupied executive positions previously, it was not until 1925 that Chrysler really began his meteoric rise to fame and fortune. In that year he organized the Chrysler Motor Corporation with the old Maxwell plant as a nucleus. He made a small car in the medium price field and other motor manufacturers scoffed. But it became instantly popular and the profits started to mount. Later the Dodge company was acquired by Chrysler and cars were introduced under several other names. At his death his plants employed more than 50,000 persons.

Chrysler's success, closely paralleling that of earlier industrial giants in American history, was approached by that of no other man in the last fifteen years. Perhaps he was the exception that proves the rule that the day of unlimited opportunity in the United States is past, but if so this period was indeed short-lived. Certainly no man fifty years ago, or prior to that time, made so phenomenal a success of any undertaking in the short span of fifteen years.

The Great Game of Politics

and conceded. This being the case, there seems no sense in being subtle or evasive or equivocal as to which side we are on.

AND, of course, there is no sense in not extending to England every possible aid with every possible thing we have. Standing in the way of doing that are the complications caused by the politics of an election year. Difficulties, which may yet be surmounted, have prevented the sending to England of the over-age destroyers which she so acutely needs. Difficulties, which but for politics would not have arisen, also have blocked helpful action in other directions "short of war."

THERE remains, however, one thing which we could do to help with no difficulty whatever, and that is stop—and stop completely—the steady stream of pessimism about the ultimate outcome of the war which for many weeks has been flowing out of Washington, which permeates the governmental departments, which has been privately contributed to by our Ambassadors and publicly voiced by Cabinet members. A short time ago Secretary of War Stimson spoke of the possibility of the annihilation of England in sixty days, and soon afterward Secretary of the Navy Knox mentioned thirty days as the possible limit of her survival.

THERE IS no question whatever of the pro-British and anti-Nazi feeling of these two officials. Nevertheless, statements of that kind are helpful to the Nazis, hurtful to the English, despite the fact that they are made to accelerate our defense preparations. They are in line with information which certain individuals in State and War Department, pro-British enough themselves, have been privately passing out for a long time. Ever since the collapse of France newspapermen, in confidential touch with these men, have been told that there was not a chance that England could be saved. Inevitably, a good deal of that kind of talk has found its way into print.

NOW, it is all very well to be realistic, but there seems no excuse at this time for that kind of realism. In the first place, it is not realistic—it is pessimistic; in the second place, even if it were more nearly true than it is, the disservice to a cause which we hope to see prevail is obvious. The great basic British asset is their unbeatable and unbreakable spirit. In the life-and-death fight in which she is now engaged, which she is determined to win and which she is convinced she will win in the end, it is no help to have friendly public officials in the United States voice the hopeless view that she cannot win—promote the doctrine that England is doomed.

THAT IS the idea the Germans would like to promulgate. The great objective of the Nazi drive is to break down the British morale. It is a distinct aid to that drive to lament that the crushing of England is merely a matter of time. It would seem that the least we could do would be to help strengthen the British morale with strongly expressed belief in her ultimate triumph rather than promote enemy strategy by deprecating the hopelessness of a contest which is far from hopeless.

MR. JAMES BONE, editor of the Manchester Guardian, and certainly as informed and free from propaganda as an Englishman as has come here since the war began, had an article in the Baltimore Sun the other day which it would be helpful if all these "England-is-doomed" politicians and jobholders could read. In it he said that the only doubt of ultimate English triumph he had encountered was in the United States. In England, Mr. Bone said, no one has any thought that they will not be able successfully to resist. "There will," he said, "be blood and tears, but he shall not pass. He may have some surprises for us, but we will have some nasty ones for him. The weeks will show."

AND then Mr. Bone quotes that thrilling final sentence from Mr. Churchill's speech last June, reprints of which can be read on the walls of offices and rooms all over Great Britain: "We shall not flag nor fail; we shall fight on the seas and on the oceans; we shall fight with growing confidence in the air; we shall defend our island whatever the cost—we shall never surrender." To a people making that kind of fight, with that kind of leader and that kind of spirit, it is no help to have a friend sit on the side lines and spread the doctrine that they are bound to lose. It ought to stop. Even if it were true it ought to stop. But it is not true.

HOW TO BE YOUR OWN DECORATOR

Make Your House Look Cool

If you live in the same house the year round it's not only more comfortable, but a pleasant change to take down your over-draperies, take up your wool rugs and put away unnecessary ornaments—strip your room at it were, to keep it cool for summer.

Instead of the old-fashioned colorless slip covers of our grandmothers' days, there are delightful striped tickings which cost about 40c a yard, of which you can make slip covers for sofa and chairs which are covered in warm-felted fabrics. A cotton or fiber rug is a pleasant change, or if your floors are hard wood, a few scatter rugs may replace your room-sized Wilton. It's amazing what a transformation can be made in a room at little or no expense, especially if you will make the slip covers yourself.

If you have Venetian blinds glass curtains are unnecessary, leaving or not, as you like, the valance of the winter overdraperies, should it be of chintz. If of a heavy material, it is better to remove it as well as the curtains. If you have window shades, you may wish to put up curtains to reach just to the window sill or drop to the floor as you like. Whether or not you use them often depends not so much on the appearance of the room inside, as on the protection they will give you from too near neighbors. Curtains naturally should be of white or cream. In fabrics for slip covers choose cool colors such as the blues and pale greens or a soft straw color. Keep away from pinks, reds and the deeper colors as they will defeat your purpose.

It is just as important to make the bedroom look cool! If you have chintz draperies they may or may not be left in place, but by all means push them back so that they hang in a straight line at each side instead carefully cleaned and put away from the increased dust and brighter sun of the summer months.

The GLASS SLIPPER by MIGNON G. EBERHART

CHAPTER NINETEEN

Rue avoided Andy's anxious, troubled blue eyes; she took up a paper knife on the desk and turned it in her fingers and forced herself to ask the question she must ask.

"When Crystal died, then, and Brule was free to marry, why didn't he marry Alicia?"

Andy was finding it difficult to reply, she thought; poor Andy. She'd been unjust. That was because she'd seen the look in Crystal's eyes when Andy entered the room.

At last he said: "Rue, I can't answer that without hurting you. I've got to know first—do you love Brule? Or is it just here worship? Why did you marry him? I know it gave you money and position and security. I know that almost any woman would have jumped at the chance because Brule's face as well as because he's such a swell fellow. But you—I can't see you marrying anybody for any of those reasons. And yet I don't think you love him."

She turned the paper knife in her fingers, noting with exactness its carved ivory handle. Why had she married Brule—Brule who was in love with Alicia and had been in love with her for years?

Yet the knowledge wasn't exactly a shock. Or rather the shock was there, but there'd been a faint disturbing warning of the thing. She remembered the night before when she and Guy had seen Alicia brush her cheek affectionately and with that unmistakable air of accustomedness against Brule's shoulder. Guy's expression hadn't changed. He'd said something and attracted the attention of the two in the doorway, but he hadn't look surprised or in any way affected by the brief little scene. But then Guy must have known. Everyone must have known except herself and Steven. Steven so wrapped in his music and in his dreams of beauty that a flaw in his beloved had never even been suspected. Andy was waiting for her reply. Why had she married Brule?

He moved nearer her; she felt his presence and would not, again, turn to meet his eyes. He said: "Won't you look at me, Rue? Won't you answer? You see—I thought, the night we went to the opera, that you loved me. As I love you."

"Don't, Andy."

"If it's because you don't want to hear what I have to say, all right. I'll not harass you. I—I love you too much. But if it's loyalty to Brule, surely you see that that loyalty is a mistaken one."

"You haven't told me why he married me and not Alicia."

"You haven't answered me," said Andy, "or—perhaps you have. Have you, Rue?"

"No, no, Andy. I . . . She moved away from him toward the end of the desk. "Don't you see I've got to know!"

"All right," said Andy. "I warned you I didn't want you to be hurt. But if it's only your pride—"

"Whatever it is, tell me."

"He married you because he and Alicia quarreled. After Crystal's death. Now will you go away with me, dear? Before it's too late. I hate telling you this, but it is because I love you so. Rue—they're going to charge you with Crystal's murder and with Julie's."

She said dully: "I didn't kill her."

He'd said no word of loving her or of wanting her to love him. He'd been honest so far as that, at any rate. And if she thought in her heart that sometime, somehow he'd come to love her—well, she'd been foolish to think it. Mad, really. But she hadn't known that Alicia was her rival.

"Rue," said Andy impatiently. "Snap out of it. Forget Brule; I had to tell you for your own protection. So you'd realize you were morally free from him. Under no obligation. But forget him. Forget Alicia. Put the whole thing in the past. Let me take you away before—well," he said grimly, "before they fix it so that I can't take you away."

The grim truth of the thing through her preoccupation; it was in its way salutary.

"Andy," she said slowly. "You said—that first night when you told me about Crystal and the letters to the police—that you thought she was murdered. You said you thought the police were right. Why did you think so?"

"Because of Alicia," said Andy. "There's no sense in beating about the bush any longer. I tried once to tell you some of what I knew without telling too much, and it only made things worse for you. I thought Alicia—well, after all, Alicia was here the afternoon of Crystal's death. And Alicia stood to gain by her death. It would leave Brule free to marry Alicia with no trouble about a divorce and no hint of talk. It was for Alicia the easy way out, and Alicia—somehow I've never thought that Alicia had any scruples in particular when it was something she wanted."

"But Crystal—Crystal practically supported Alicia, didn't she?"

Andy shrugged. "Yes—with Brule's approval. Perhaps at his instigation. Remember the situation between Alicia and Brule is—is a curious kind of thing. Both of them are conventional at heart; both of them hate anything that appears vulgar, common—blatant. And yet they are frantically in love. It was a dreadful thing—Brule marrying you to hurt Alicia. I don't know what it was they quarreled about; I don't know when and how they made up their quarrel except that when they did it was too late. Brule and you were already married, and Brule—to do him justice, Rue, I think as soon as he realized what he'd done to you and Alicia he really tried to break away from Alicia. But it was too strong for him. It—"

"Don't make me talk of it, Andy. The point is, now, Alicia is too civilized, too sophisticated to think of murder."

"What a baby you are, Rue! Alicia is a polite and polished and beautiful savage. When did she turn up yesterday afternoon?"

"Just after Julie died. She—Alicia came into my room."

"Exactly. Did you know she was in

GRAND THEATRE

From the salty shores of New England, seamen for centuries have embarked on adventure. They took uncharted seas and the fiercest storms in their stride. But now, in "The Captain Is a Lady," playing at the Grand Theatre, a descendant of those intrepid seafaring men charts a course that would have made his ancestors blanch with fear. He chooses the stormiest of seas—an Old Ladies' Home.

Abe Peabody is an unruly cantankerous old salt, and when he finds himself surrounded by beves of old ladies, things happen—the funny things that make for laughter. His stumbling but well-meaning attempts to play Cupid and the understanding friend in an Old Ladies' Home result in riotous situations seldom equalled on the screen.

HOOVER'S MISTAKES

An inspired piece from one of the New Deal propagandists says that "Hoover was a complete failure." So he was. He failed in a lot of things. He failed to draw out his salary of $75,000.00 a year while he was President, turning it all back into the Treasury. He failed to have his sons organize insurance company firms to write insurance on government enterprises. He built a Rappan resort for fishing and recreation at his own expense and gave it to the Government. None of his sons went racing through the divorce courts to the disillusionment of the public.

He never bundled up a lot of government documents to sell as a book to the faithful at a huge profit to himself and he never sold himself into political slavery to a labor organization for a $500,000 campaign fund.

He gathered a marvelous collection of war stuff and built a museum for it, but failed to ask Congress to pay the bill—he paid it himself.

He did not preach and promote class hatred and he did not try to pack the Supreme Court. He did not plow up every third row of cotton and he did not promise the American people one thing while at the very same moment doing everything to accomplish the directly opposite result.

He did not ask Congress to assess the taxpayers a billion dollars every time someone shot off a firecracker in Europe and he did not go on fishing trips on government warships accompanied by a fleet of destroyers.

Neither did he kill off all the farmers' little pigs or encourage the importation of Argentine beef.

In fact there were a lot of foolish things that Hoover didn't do that some other people have done. There are a lot of constructive things he could have done if he had not had the opposition of a Democratic Congress, but anyway he did not leave the American people $45,000,000,000 in debt.

Mrs. Hoover never made speeches or raced hither and yon on unimportant matters. She never wrote silly drivel on her everyday life and sold it to the newspapers and she never sold soap over the radio. Her only appearance was as an honorary member of the Girl Scouts of America.

She never invited Communist youth to the White House as her guests. The Hoover family seems to have made a failure of about everything that goes nowadays.

Handling himself like a veteran, Tony Biancosino, of the Boco Boys' Club, thrilled 1200 fight fans in the St. Ann's A. Arena, last night, by battering Carman Orrino, of the Seibold Club, into submission, in a three round fight. The bout was the wind-up of a ten-bout card.

Biancosino in evening his count with Orrino took two of the three rounds and held his foe even in the canvas. There was question as to the margin of victory of the Boco fighter as the bout wasn't even close and Orrino was beaten by quite a number of points on the tally sheets.

Once, Orrino went down on one knee but did not take a count. In the second, a Biancosino hook caught him but before he could fall, Orrino wrapped his arms about his foe's neck and saved himself a trip to the canvas. Twice more in the fight, Biancosino landed punches which shook up the Seibold fighter.

It was a clear case of a boxer triumphing over a slugger. Orrino did plenty of swinging in the bout but his blows were wild and on one occasion in the second round, he caught six solid blows without getting in a return punch.

Only in the final round did Orrino look good. He traded blow for blow with Biancosino and chased the latter all over the ring, without letting up on his swings. But Tony was playing a blocking game and with a good lead took things easily, occasionally landing a hook.

Although the wind-up stole the show, another Bristolian, Chester Tershon, of the Franklin team, made the biggest hit. Tershon, formerly was an usher at the St. Ann's bouts, but decided to take up the amateur game. He was pitted against Billy Otto, of Eastside for his debut.

And what a showing the former usher made. He rushed from his corner and began to pummel the body of Otto. Otto tried to break away but was hooked with a left and down he went. He took the count of three and tried to escape Tershon but the Franklin youth connected with body blows and down went Otto again. This time referee Moffo did not bother to count as he knew the Eastsider was finished. It took just one minute and eight seconds for the knockout.

The semi-windup between Sol DeLessa, Lamb's club, and William Whitlock, Eastside, was equally as good as the showing these boys made last week which bout went to DeLessa. DeLessa won again last night with a wider margin than before. He took the first and third rounds and lost the second. Whitlock's best blows were two hard rights towards the finish of the second session. DeLessa was the aggressor throughout and shook up his opponent with a coking right hand punch in the initial round.

George Larovere, Lamb's Club, was the victim of a rather poor decision with James Riccio, of the Diamond team. It appeared as if the Lamb's Club fighter won the first and second rounds and deserved an even break in the third but the officials ruled that Riccio had won. The decision was booed and booed by the fans. Riccio was dropped for a no-count in the final round.

A last-round rally by Joe Meyers, Seibold, gave him the decision over the lanky negro, James Martin. Overhand rights accounted for the Croymont's victory as Meyers kept it in Martin's face while the Eastsiders tried to keep Meyers away with his long jab.

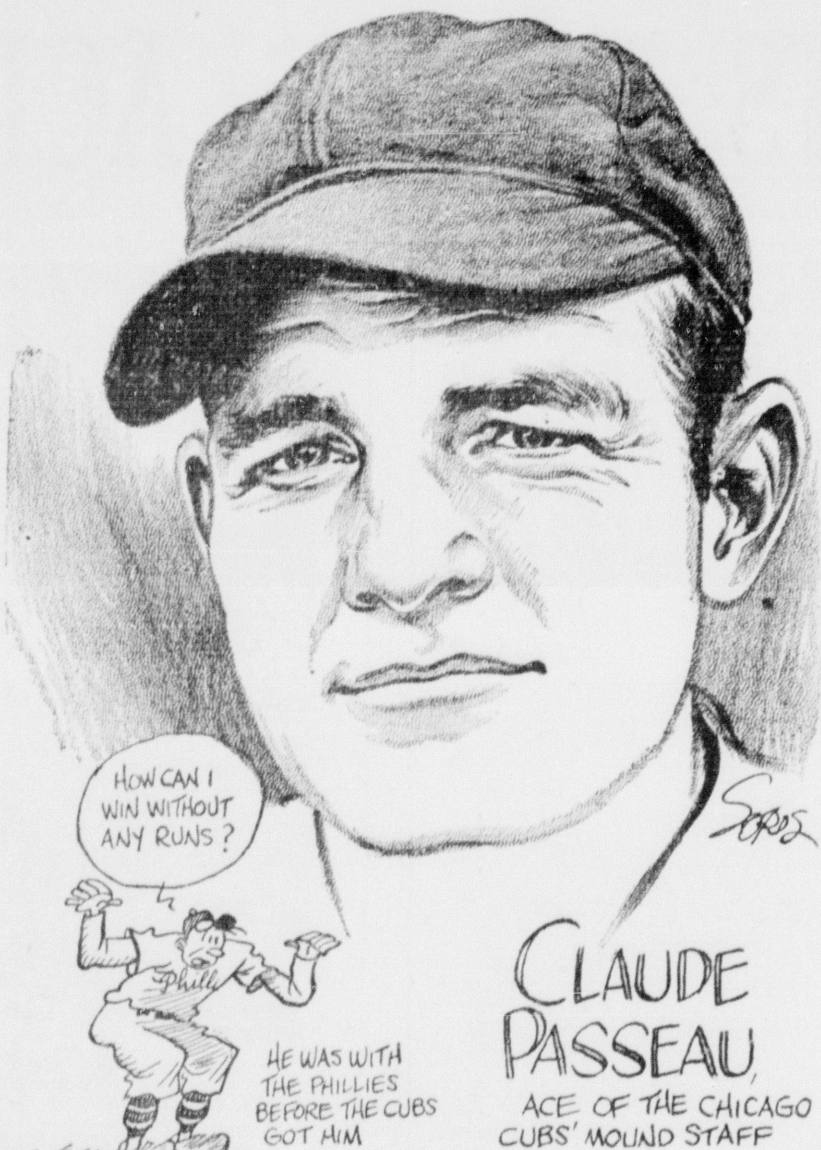

In a real punching duel, Frank Lowry, of the Lamb's Club, triumphed over Dennis White, Eastside. The last round was Lowry's margin of victory. In this canto, the Lamb fighter had White groggy and holding on. Lowry also got in a nice right towards the close of the second round which White carried by working his one-two punch and skipping away.

That lightning action left jab of Marino Francano, Lamb's Club, gave him a victory over Raymond Brown, Seibold Club. All during the fight, Marino would send his left jab at Brown's face and always connected, forcing the Seibold's boy's head to swing back and forth like a rubber band. Marino copped the entire three rounds, despite a gallant last-ditch rally by Brown.

The two Walter Keyes, of the Colored Elks were in action last night. The first one lost to Jasper Mangiaracini and the second won his bout with Dick Maher, unattached Newtown youth. Mangiaracini won the final two rounds of his bout after holding the colored youth even in the first. Keyes tired towards the finish of the bout and was on the receiving end of many blows.

Both Keyes and Maher were bleeding at the close of their three-round session, Maher was the aggressor of the bout but was clipped plenty by Keyes' short right and an occasional shot to the bread-basket.

Carl Spinelli, Franklin, made good on his comeback attempt, when he scored easily over George Regan, Eastside. Regan was no match for Spinelli who won the entire three rounds, in fact, Regan did not appear willing to mix it at all, being contented to keep away from Spinelli and doing some blocking.

Spinelli took the entire three sessions by big margins and the victor was never in doubt.

DIAMANTY'S TEAM HOLDS 2ND PLACE

(Roblin and Haas field)

CORNWELLS, Aug. 21—Joe Diamanti's Diamond team held on to their hopes of finishing on top of the Bristol Suburban League by taking undisputed possession of second place in the league standing, trouncing the Voltz-Texaco nine, 9-3, on the Bensalem High School field.

There will very little to the Diamond triumph as that team took advantage of eight passes and a hit batsman in the second and third frames to score the nine markers. Mixed in with the wildness of the Voltz pitchers were triples by Helveston and Angelo and singles by McGowan, Fletcher, and Sak.

Helveston batted better than he hurried, connecting for a single, double and triple in four trips to the plate. Pollack had three out of three for the losing club.

GREEN, LAWRENCE AND THE 2 WALDRONS LOSE

TRENTON, N. J., Aug. 21—The Waldron brothers, Joe and Jim, bowed to Jack Hollister and Jim Sieger, 6-3, 7-5, in the course of the city men's doubles tournament at Cadwallader Park courts last evening; while Herb Lawrence and Nelson Green, both of Bristol, Pa., lost to Fritz Kuser and Jim Allen. Green and Lawrence, kins of the courts here in 1939, lost to the tune of 3-6, 6-2, 7-5.

The Waldrons formed the team named to accompany Lawrence and Green, defending champions, to the finals. Hollister and Sieger are members of the faculty of George School, Newtown, Pa., and Kuser and Allen were seeded fourth.

The victors of last night's matches will meet this afternoon at the Cadwallader courts at two o'clock.

Steady play by the veteran Kuser was the leading factor in the downfall of Green and Lawrence last night. The defending champions reeled off the first set in short order, but Kuser brought strong overhead shots and a baffling lob into action as time wore on and he and Allen evened the count by winning the second set, 6-2, running out the last four games in order after the two teams had halved the first four. The rubber set was deadlocked at 5-all when Kuser and Allen broke service to take the next game, 3-1, and punishing serves sealed the verdict in the final game.

Hollister and Sieger were all over the court as they continued their tourney march by scoring their third victory over seeded competition. The George School instructors first gained the attention of tourney followers when they dumped the No. 5 seeded team of Norman Swayne and Russ Cloak out of the running, then stood park observers on their ears last Friday when they eliminated the second-seeded combination of City Champion Eddie Moylan and Bob Boyd, 6-3, 3-6, 8-6.

Bob Walsh, tournament director, announced last night that the deadline for entries in the women's doubles will be six o'clock tonight. Eight teams have signified their intention of competing, but unless an additional eight enters the tournament will have to be postponed. Teams desiring to enter are asked to call the parks courts between 2 and 4 p. m. today. The number is Trenton 2-4425.

"JAKE" PAUL PITCHES IN OLD-TIME FORM

EDGELEY, Aug. 21—"Jake" Paul was in old-time form on the Edgely field last evening as he blanked the Edgely A. C. in a Bristol Suburban League tilt. The defeat practically eliminated any hopes Edgely had for winning the championship. Final score was: Odd Fellows, 7; Edgely, 0.

Three hits was all the Edgely batters could get off the hurling of Paul who set down five via the strikeout route. He issued three passes. The only extra base hit off his delivery was a two-bagger by Stan Dick in the fifth frame.

The two Edgely twirlers, Ralphie Linck and Stan Dick were rapped for eight blows. Linck did not finish the first inning, retiring but one batter and allowing four runs and the same number of hits. The Oddies counted two more in the second on three hits, one a triple from the bat of Sid Purcell.

Incidentally, Purcell was the leading chubber of the evening, getting three for three, "Buddy" Bilger had two out of three to also aid the Oddies in scoring.

Willkie Renews Challenge To F. D. R.

President of the United States—until Jan. 20, 1941—and Mr. Roosevelt, a candidate for re-election.

"It is true that Franklin D. Roosevelt is President of the United States," Willkie said. "It is equally true that he is running for a third term as President of the United States. The democratic process basically rests upon the discussion and any man who seeks the office of President of the United States, not alone should be willing to but is under an obligation to publicly discuss the questions before the American people."

And, emphasizing the unusual character of the race Mr. Roosevelt is making, Willkie added:

"The President is running for a third term as President, and in view of the fact that this is a violation of a tradition of 150 years' standing, it is my judgment that he is under a double obligation to discuss the issues as well as the particular issue of a third term. I do not believe even the President of the United States has a right to eliminate public discussion or to refrain from engaging in it when seeking public office."

"Again, I repeat, the democratic process is based on public discussion." Willkie made his renewed challenge during a highly informal press conference held in the improvised press room set up in the local hotel. He said since the newspapermen had been coming out to see him for earlier press conferences, he thought he would return the courtesy.

In addition to criticizing Mr. Roosevelt for not accepting the challenge to public debate of campaign issues, Willkie questioned the action of the President in negotiating the Canadian-American defense pact announced Sunday after the President's meeting with Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King of Canada on the Canadian frontier.

He said he thought the people were entitled to know more about the terms of the agreement and added that when full information was available he would be glad to give his views.

"One of my objections to the President's foreign policy," Willkie said, "is that he doesn't take the people into his confidence. We ought to know more in detail just what this involves. After the President has taken us into his confidence I shall be very glad to express my view on it."

He made it clear that he was not opposing the pact—that he merely wanted to know what it meant and what commitments if any it involved.

Willkie today received additional evidence of support from Democrats opposed to a third term for any President. He conferred with William A. Comstock, Democratic Governor of Michigan in 1933 and 1934, and with Alfred Debo, who was chairman of the Michigan delegation to the Democratic National Convention which nominated Mr. Roosevelt for the first time at Chicago in 1932.

After the conference, Comstock declared:

"I shall support Mr. Willkie because I do not believe in breaking the anti-third term precedent. I believe Mr. Willkie, on his record, can bring to the administration of national affairs the practical wisdom that has been so lacking in New Deal executives."

Comstock said that he and Debo would organize an independent Democratic Willkie-for-President group, which would be entirely distinct from any Republican organization and would be financed separately.

Willkie today reiterated his denial of the accusation made last night by Secretary Ickes that the Republican nominee was a member of Tammany Hall.

"It's just pure bunk," Willkie said. "It is no secret that he has been a Democrat. Willkie said that in 1935 he had been elected a member of the New York County Democratic Committee together with Mrs. Willkie."

He ran on the same ticket as James Ickes should be put on the Republican

A. Farley, former chairman of the Democratic National Committee, and Frank Walker, former treasurer of the Democratic National Committee, he said. But he declared that this did not make him a member of Tammany Hall, and added that he had never been in Tammany Hall in his life.

Willkie, when he made his unscheduled appearance before the two local business clubs, received a tumultuous welcome. When he entered, the chairman of the entertainment committee was delivering an address welcoming members of Willkie's party and accompanying newspaper correspondents but the speaker changed pace quickly and turned his speech of welcome into a prediction that Willkie would be elected.

Willkie then was introduced and after taking the job at Ickes, remarked that he always liked to visit Rushville but that "during the next eight years" he might not be able to visit here as frequently as in the past.

Willkie said he had received several hundred telegrams and telephone calls expressing resentment at the Ickes speech, some of them suggesting that Ickes should be put on the Republican Party payroll "because he is so helpful to our cause."

A correspondent suggested that such employment of the Secretary of the Interior might violate some provision of the Hatch Act. Willkie laughed and replied:

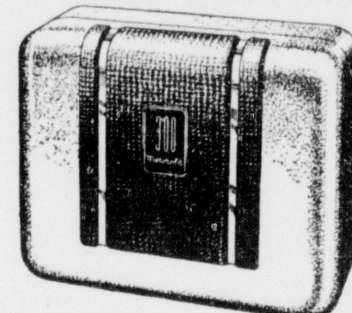

"Probably, but I wouldn't want Ickes around any way."

Willkie said that of the thousands of messages he had received commenting on his acceptance speech, only three had criticized it adversely.

The nominee declined to comment on a suggestion voiced by Rep. Martin Dies (D., Tex.) that both President Roosevelt and Willkie should advocate outlawing of the Communist Party by statute.

We've been sold BETTER HEALTH

Orange juice and tomato juice on the breakfast table! Spinach and salads in our daily diet! New, better, more healthful food for every meal every day! These benefits have been sold to us through advertising.

A few years ago we had oranges only for Christmas. Then growers started advertising the healthful qualities of orange juice. Prices came down to where all can afford this golden fruit as part of the daily diet.

For years a distinguished physician and nutrition expert tried in vain to get people to drink tomato juice. Then advertising took up the cause. In 1937, Americans used 5,750,000 cases of tomato juice.

The Roman Emperor Augustus and, later, Napoleon knew the value of salads in the diet. Yet salads did not become a diet habit until advertising began an educational program less than a generation ago.

These are but a few of the examples of how advertising has popularized health-giving foods... how it has led the march to the American Way of Living.
